

COOLIDGE FAVORS SECOND DISARMAMENT MEET

"EYE THAT NEVER SLEEPS" COOLIDGE CALLED "THE A. P."

Praises Fair and Constant Work of Greatest News Agency.

New York, April 22.—(By the Associated Press)—President Coolidge called the Associated Press, "one of the eyes of mankind which never sleeps."

"The gathering and publication of news has a greater significance than is sometimes realized," the President said. "No large enterprise can exist for itself alone. It ministers to some great need, it performs some great service, not for itself, but for others; or, failing therein, it ceases to be profitable and ceases to exist. This is the case with The Associated Press."

"Without ceasing, it assembles each day, the events of each part of the world and transmits them to every other part. The fundamental reason for this lies in the fact that it is felt to be of vital importance to each man and each community to know what other men and other communities are doing. The news is printed and read, not for the mere purpose of entertainment, amusement and recreation, but for the purpose of the practical purpose of information, in order that by means of accurate knowledge of what others are doing a course may be laid out of accurate and successful action."

Is Educational Work

"Faith in the American people means a faith in their ability to form sound judgments, when once the facts have been presented to them clearly and without prejudice. It is this educational work, national in its scope, that the Associated Press performs, and upon its integrity and fairness depends, in large measure, the course of public opinion in the United States. This work is done without any tinge of personal or political opinion. A very practical need exists and it is met by a very practical service, and it is a service which is needed by each one of us making it an appeal entirely to the intelligence of the individual and recognizing fully the American ideal of intellectual independence."

Touching upon public expenditures, the President asserted there is a general vigorous demand "for every possible relief from the burden of unnecessary public expenditure."

Assaults on Treasury

"Yet notwithstanding this, minority groups of one kind or another, and organizations sometimes almost nationwide in their ramifications, are making the most determined assaults upon the public treasury," the President said. "I am advised by the director of the bureau of the budget that careful computation discloses that there are bills pending that are seriously pressed for passage, not including the expenditures of the federal government for next year by about $3,600,000,000. This would mean that outside of the postoffice department, which is practically self-sustaining, the present rate of expenditure would be more than doubled. Each one of these items taken by itself is not large and its supporters argue that certainly the government can afford to make this additional payment. But taken in the aggregate they make the stupendous sum I have mentioned and their assumption by the government would mean nothing less than financial disaster to the nation."

Regarding foreign relations, the President declared the maintenance of the prosperity of America depends on the maintenance of its ideals.

"Selfishness is another name for suicide," he said. "A nation that is morally dead will soon be financially dead. The progress of the world rests on courage, honor and faith."

Don't Hold Affection

"It is undoubtedly too much to suppose that we hold very much of the affectionate regard of other nations. At the same time we do hold their respect. Our position is such that we are trusted and our business institutions and government considered worthy of confidence. If there is disappointment in some directions that we do not enter alliances with them, it is more than over-balanced by the knowledge that there is no danger that we shall enter alliances against them. It may be known to every people that we are seeking no acquisition of territory and maintaining no military establishment with unfriendly, hostile intent. Like our political institutions all of this is a powerful example throughout the world. Very many of the nations have been the recipients of our favor and have had the advantage of our help in some time of extremity. We have no traditional enemies. We have come to a position of great power and responsibility."

The great hope of the nation, he declared, lies in developing what is good and in that he said: "One never knows a better man than a better man."

"These are our guarantees of internal peace and progress."

Rev. Wine of Mt. Morris was a business visitor here Saturday.

MADAME DUSE'S FAREWELL TOUR ENDED IN DEATH

Noted Tragedienne Died This Morning at Hotel in Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 21.—Madame Eleonora Duse, noted Italian tragedienne, who arrived in Pittsburgh three weeks ago today on her farewell tour of the United States, died Sunday in a hotel. Death was caused by influenza and other complications.

The body will be taken to New York as soon as arrangements can be made and later will be removed to Italy. Madame Duse, after a retirement from the stage extending over a long period, last year was induced by personal friends to make another tour of Europe and the United States. After a triumphant series of appearances in Europe, she came to America in October, 1923, and under the management of Morris Gest, played in New York, Boston and Philadelphia.

She was generally acclaimed by thousands of admirers. Her condition was such that she played only once or twice a week.

Was Caught in Rain.

After her appearance at Indianapolis she decided not to take her usual rest of three days but came direct to Pittsburgh. She was here for a week before she appeared in Syria Mosque.

Madame Duse's illness dated from the day of her appearance here. Early that day she decided to visit the Mosque, and attended only by her chauffeur, she went to the building, two blocks from her hotel. She failed to locate the main entrance and walked about in the rain for ten minutes. When she entered the hall she complained of a chill. On the stage that night she appeared in a weakened condition.

She was to have appeared in Boston and New York before sailing for Italy on May 12.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, April 22.—Replying to an inquiry by Senator Stanford, republican, Oregon, William R. Hearst said in a telegram made public today that the testimony of H. W. "If your committee would give any credit to such a nonsensical statement as that," Mr. Hearst's telegram said, "you would be summoning every member of that republican convention."

DISAPPEARANCE OF BOOZE EXPLAINED BY DEPT. JUSTICE

Report Read Today Under Instruction from New Atty. Gen.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, April 22.—A department of justice explanation of how seized liquor disappeared from the department through "petty graft" was placed before the Daugherty investigating committee today, toward the end of a long session devoted to testimony by Chairman Thompson of the Federal Trade Commission about the department's alleged failures in prosecuting liquor interests under the anti-trust laws.

W. W. Grimes of the Justice Department, who said he was acting by direction of Attorney General Stone, read a report by special investigator into the liquor disappearances. It did not show where the goods went, however, and contained nothing bearing on previous testimony that some of it was taken to the private home of former Attorney General Daugherty.

The witness declared there was nothing in the law to permit destruction of liquor seized in trunks and other baggage and never claimed. Consequently, he said, a large supply had accumulated and some of it had vanished mysteriously. He insisted, however, that "petty graft" of that kind might be expected in any large government department.

Tells of Investigation.

The first departmental investigation into these disappearances, Grimes said, was made by an agent named Cox, whose report showed little as to who was responsible.

"Wasn't the Cox report made to whitewash the department?" asked Senator Wheeler.

"I'll say this," replied the witness, "Cox isn't a regular investigator. W. J. Burns when he came in fired a number of people and had his own investigation made. This second investigation disclosed a somewhat different set of facts than the Cox report."

Further charges of dereliction in enforcement of the prohibition and anti-trust law under Attorney General Daugherty, were heard Monday by the senate Daugherty committee.

F. M. Boucher, former department of justice investigator, testified that confiscated liquor was "sorted out" at the department and the best of it kept in the office of the chief of investigation bureau to supply "officials" and others. He was followed on the stand by A. E. Bunch, who told the committee that 100 cases of whiskey illegally taken from him had been "hauled away and delivered to people all over town."

Called to testify regarding anti-trust cases, Houston Thompson, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission said it had been "useless" for the commission to turn over to Mr. Daugherty, the evidence it had gathered, warranting criminal anti-trust prosecutions. Until the impeachment charges were made in the house against Daugherty in 1922 he said, the commission could not even get replies to its letters on these subjects.

Speaker Indignant

Speaker Gillett appeared at the Daugherty committee hearing and questioned H. L. Schaife, committee witness as to his statement that liquor seized in Washington by prohibition agents some years ago, went to Gillett's office.

"Where did you get your information?" the speaker asked.

"Most of it came from Congressman Woodruff, (republican, Michigan)," said Schaife.

Schaife, a former department of justice investigator reiterated that his "information" was that the speaker got the liquor for "a constituent."

Speaker Gillett made a statement to the committee under oath. He said that in the spring of 1922, he had heard and denied the report that a "trunk of liquor" had come to his office.

On investigation he said he found that a trunk from which liquor had been removed had been sent to his office for a constituent in 1919.

Trunk was Removed

Department of Justice records were produced by the speaker to show that the liquor had been removed, and he said Schaife knew this when he testified.

"I think it is an outrage," the speaker said. "I don't know what his motive was. If he had told the whole facts it would have exonerated me."

F. M. Boucher, a former justice department agent testified that during his employment "there was always a supply of liquor in a safe in the chief's office," meaning the office of the chief of the bureau of criminal investigation of the department of justice. This liquor was always "given to people," he said.

SAYS GENTLEMAN'S AGREEMENT FAILED TO ACCOMPLISH END

Reason for Vote Which Excludes Japanese is Made Public.

Washington, April 22.—Reasons for the congressional action putting an end to the "gentlemen's agreement" with Japan, has been given out in several quarters.

Realization that the "gentlemen's agreement" with Japan had failed to accomplish its purpose, and not the letter of Ambassador Hanhara protesting against proposed termination of it by the United States, prompted congress to write a Japanese exclusion provision in the immigration bill, Chairman Johnson of the house immigration committee, declared.

Much Misunderstanding

"There is much misunderstanding," Mr. Johnson said, "as to reasons which influenced congress in passing that provision of the immigration bill which excludes a permanent resident alien who are ineligible to citizenship and which terminates the 'gentlemen's agreement' with Japan."

"There is an impression first that the action was occasioned by resentment at the letter of Ambassador Hanhara. Long before the letter appeared, the measure was assured of passage in the house and a poll in the senate on the day before showed, I am told, at least 54 votes certain for the exclusion feature. The Hanhara letter forced a practical unanimous action on the part of the senate."

Representative Johnson said congress had decided to terminate the agreement for the following reasons:

"It has failed to accomplish the purpose for which President Roosevelt explained it was made, to wit, to prevent an increase of unassimilable Japanese population in continental United States, as the exclusion act had done with the Chinese population. Roosevelt's understanding with Japan was that if the 'gentlemen's agreement' in operation failed to accomplish the agreed purpose an exclusion act would be put in force."

"Immigration is a domestic question regulation of which is the sole prerogative of congress. The 'gentlemen's agreement' is an invasion of that prerogative by another department of the government."

"The 'gentlemen's agreement' gives Japan the right to say how many and what particular Japanese shall come into United States territory and is therefore a surrender of our sovereign right in a purely domestic question."

CONTINUE PLEA IN MODIFICATION VOLSTEAD LAW

Committee Told Bootlegger is Result Anti-Saloon League.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, April 22.—Additional arguments in favor of legalizing the sale of 2.75 per cent beer were presented today to the house judiciary committee.

A dozen witnesses continued the appeal for modification of the Volstead act which was begun yesterday by representatives of the American Federation of Labor.

Henry Priest, St. Louis, representing the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, recommended legalizing the sale of 2.75 per cent as a means of lessening violations of the Volstead act. He assailed their recent enforcement and urged that "moral suasion" be used "instead of guns."

The bootlegger is a result of the Anti-Saloon League, Priest said. The prohibition amendment would be repealed by a vote of 90 per cent of the citizenship of all violators would go to the polls, he added.

START REPAIRS OF DIXON ARCH EARLY THIS A. M.

Will Be Covered with Metal; Ready Before Decoration Day.

Contractor W. B. Baume started work this morning on dismantling the arch on Galena avenue just south of Second street, preparatory to rebuilding the structure. All of the old plaster board, which has served as a covering for the arch since its construction almost six years ago, is to be removed and will be replaced with metal covering.

Some strengthening of the supports may be necessary and the base on the east side of Galena avenue which has settled considerably will be replaced with concrete, the old wood-work being torn out. The work is to be rushed along as rapidly as possible with a view of having the arch rebuilt, rewired and repainted before Decoration day.

An examination of the frame work showed that it had been little damaged, the covering serving as protection, and only minor reinforcement will be made in the rebuilding of the structure.

Last evening at the regular meeting of the Toastmasters' club at the Y. M. C. A. H. V. Hunt, General Secretary of the "Y," was pleasantly surprised when he was presented with a purse of $100 as a token of esteem from the club. DerKindern, one of the members of the club was called on for a test in parliamentary practice and took the occasion to make a motion of commendation on the "Y" secretary's "reckless driving," resulting in his recent auto accident while driving out from Chicago. This motion was amended, whereupon Mr. DerKindern, speaking for the Toastmasters' club, presented the secretary with the purse. He spoke in behalf of the club of the high place that Mr. Hunt had won in their hearts during the short time he had lived in Dixon. THAW STAGES A SCENE IN TRIAL OF HIS PETITION

Excitedly Denounces Lawyer Who Opposes His Release.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Philadelphia, April 22.—Just as the Harry K. Thaw sanity trial recessed for luncheon, Thaw rushed to the press table and burst in an excited speech in denunciation of William A. Gray who had been addressing the jury in opposition to Thaw's release. Thaw said that he had not been excited because of Mr. Gray's speech, but was nervous because of the danger of losing the jury if certain records were introduced.

Under the common law, Thaw told those around the press table, a juror might be withdrawn. He talked loud and rapidly.

"Now, wait a minute," Thaw cried. "My mother wants to talk to you, too, don't go away."

Thaw's mother, however, sat calmly and gave no indication of planning to join the talk.

J. M. Patterson, counsel for Thaw, came over to Thaw and protested against "unreasonable questioning" and called out angrily "let Mr. Thaw alone. He is entitled to the same privacy as any other American citizen."

When told Thaw had volunteered the information, Mr. Patterson appeared non-plussed. Thaw still was gesticulating when the courtroom was cleared.

NIGHT SESSION OF SENATE ON BONUS LIKELY

Cash Payment Plan is Introduced By Some of Its Members.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, April 22.—Facing a contest on a proposal for a cash option in the insurance bonus bill as a result of the insurgent movement in democratic ranks, the senate prepared today to go into a night session to hasten action on the measure.

The cash option fight flared up yesterday after Senator Walsh, Mass., author of the cash amendment, having formally withdrawn it, Senator Copeland, democrat, New York, backed by Senators Dill, democrat, Washington and Norris, republican, Nebraska, offered an identical proposal.

Democratic leaders had just announced their intention of withholding the proposal until after enactment of the straight insurance bill, planning then to move for its adoption as an amendment to the law.

The substitute bill would give the veterans an option of full cash payments instead of insurance.

The substitute calls for issuance of $1,500,000,000 additional bonds to draw the cash payments which would be made available nine months after enactment of the bill.

LITTLE JOE THE BASEBALL SEASON IS NOW IN FULL BLAST - DOWN AT THE BARBER SHOP!

The President devoted his address, delivered to the leading newspaper publishers and editors of the country, to the country's foreign relations in the main although he reminded those who heard him that "our first duty is to ourselves" and that "American standards must be maintained. American institutions must be preserved."

"Service" Was Theme.

The whole address was based on the general theme of service—the service that the American government might render to the people and the service the American nation might give to the world. He drew the theme from the work of the Associated Press.

"The work of the Associated Press, both necessary and logical," he said, "indicates that the true method would appear to lie in recognizing the broad principle of our individual and national dependence, calculating the requirements which flow from that condition, and governing ourselves accordingly. For all our seeming sorrow, it appears, Are real blessings in a mask of tears. So if success be tardy at our call, It is to test our courage, that is all. Easter Concert Was a Triumph

The Sterling Gazette of Monday evening has the following to say of Madame Johanna Hess-Burr of Dixon and her advanced pupils in their concert in our neighboring city:

The Easter concert given at the Illini theater at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon under the direction of Madame Johanna Hess-Burr of Dixon was a triumph of music artistry and was welcomed with enthusiasm and heartiness by a large audience. The event was sponsored by the Ladies Guild of the Grace Episcopal church.

The concert left no doubt of Madame Hess-Burr's musicianship and mastery of directorship, and the chorus and solo work was a delight to the crowd, who showed their appreciation in applause which warmed the hearts of the vocalists and their director.

Madame Johanna Hess-Burr with her presentation of Il Trovatore (Verdi) and Cavalleria Rusticana (Mascagni) scored an unusual success for herself and her supporting company. The colonial scene, which took place between two operatic sketches, was charmingly staged and remarkably presented by Miss Knick. Her selections, "To a Rose," (MacFayden), "The Minuet," (Liza Lehmann), and "The Voice and the Flute" (Dennmore) were well received and applauded. Miss Knick was attractively costumed in colonial dress.

Madame Johanna Hess-Burr was assisted by Miss Celeste Ward, organist, Charles Kelman, flutist, and John E. Earle, in charge of the stage management.

The setting for both operas was conducive to a good realization of the atmosphere of the stories, the costumes adding color and grace to the occasion. The prison scene from Il Trovatore showing the prison tower and including in the two principal solos the famous "Miserere," with which the entire audience was perhaps most familiar was unique and one of the outstanding remarkable achievements in stage setting for the entire affair.

Scene 5 in the dungeon of the castle was particularly graceful, the simplicity of the stage picture and the grace of the figures against background of deep sky-blue was most striking. Miss Miller as Leonora, Mrs. Wilhelm as the wandering gypsy, Azucena, and Mrs. Earle as Manrico, the young chieftain, portrayed splendid vocal training and finish in technique through the entire sketch.

Cavalleria Rusticana was participated in by Mrs. Dysart, Mrs. Wilhelm and Mrs. Earle, each assuming her role with clever interpretative ability and high conception of the theme of the opera. The solos and choruses were delightful and the costuming pretty.

PERIOD FURNITURE Sheraton

Severe, simple, straight lines mark Sheraton furniture, although the curve line is not abandoned. Very little carving is used, but what is shown is dainty and conventional. Most ornamentation is inlay work. Most chairs are rectangular with slightly curved and broken top rails. The legs are straight, square, turned, tapered or fluted. Sometimes the chair back is curved, as shown here, but the broken top rail is typical. The kidney shaped table is Sheraton's original design.

VIENNA.—On the ground that Vienna banks commonly charge traders 2 per cent a week, or 100 per cent a year, for loans, a Vienna money lender who had charged a poor couple 140 per cent was acquitted in appellate court on a charge of usury. The judges agreed that if he were to be convicted, few banks could evade prosecution.

GEOLOGY AND POWER PLANTS.

The Commonwealth Edison Co. of Chicago and the early glacial period of the Chicago region may appear to have little relation to each other. But when the power company wanted to know where it should place its ground connections of electric currents and lightning arresters, it called in the government geological survey to help.

A ground connection, which is usually an iron pipe driven into the ground, much reach a moist place to be effective. In sandy areas, therefore, it has to be driven deeper than in places where the ground-water level is higher. The location of sandy or other special soils is not easily discovered in a big city where the ground is rather thoroughly covered with buildings and pavements concealing the soil.

Some time ago the geological survey of the department of the interior studied all the Chicago region, mapping ancient shore lines of glacial lakes, locating abandoned beach ridges and other deposits. With these maps in hand the public utilities company found it comparatively simple to plot the areas in which it may have to use ground pipes 50 percent longer than those generally used in other parts of the city.

When the geological survey was made there were undoubtedly many persons who regarded the geologists with considerable scorn. They couldn't see any practical use for such scientific researches. But exploring the Arctic, scaling high mountains, traversing formidable deserts or tropical jungles, delving into ancient ruins and similar scientific pastimes all have their uses to those who are wise enough to recognize them.

LORADO TAFT ADMONISHES US.

Illinoisans might take a little lesson in loyalty from their eminent fellow citizen, Lorado Taft. Loyalty to the beauty of the state—its magnificent prairies, its hills and streams, its wonderful skies. He speaks eloquently on the subjects of beauty at home. "A Round Trip to Europe" at a cost of $8, he calls it; said trip being made on the Illinois river.

Illinoisans look away from the beauty at their doors to view the cathedrals of Europe, the rolling ocean, the towering mountain. Yet Mr. Taft, artistic to his finger tips, found none of these so satisfying to his eye as the "solid, enduring beauty" of the Illinois prairie.

Said the famous artist recently:

"Illinois never looked so good to me as on my return from abroad. I have little need of the ocean in my business. The roll and wash of the endless waters seem futile and pointless. I like the mountains, though they seemed to be theatrical pieces of stage furniture set up for effect. For real solid enduring beauty the prairies of this state are satisfying."

"Fall in line with your community and be a stockholder in the beauty of the commonwealth of Illinois. A group of some 150 art-minded folks started a few years ago to make an art survey of the state of Illinois and we have made several trips—pilgrimages—about the state. Once we went to Dixon, loveliest of Illinois residence towns—thence to Grand Detour, quaint with its grass grown streets, reminiscent of forgotten ambitions, thence to Oregon and Rockford. We were delighted with what we saw. Soon this trip will be a famous trangle beginning to Chicago. The Fox river district, too, has beauty for all who see it. Two years ago we went to Starved Rock, then to Peoria and embarked on a stern-wheel steamer to go down the Illinois river. I didn't know that such boats were in use anywhere in this country. The trip was wonderful, down past the river towns to St. Louis and back. We had the whole upper deck. Darkeys carried the goods and merchandise from boat to land over the gang plank at many stops where there is not even a pier. Beautiful river, wonderful scenery, picturesque and quaint experience—excellent food on board—a round trip to Europe, and all right in our state at a cost of $8.

"Town and country must live side by side. We must develop both. A roundabout way to do the thing you want to do is to work all your life that you do not live in order to get money to buy pleasure. Life is the greatest thing I ever got into. I love everything I have ever done in my life work. Most of all is the joy of seeing the progress of the state. Not money but the life a community produces is its real worth."—Rockford Register-Gazette.

DEADLOCK ON WAR.

Future wars will be fought with invisible rays (like radio), which will create a zone of death in which everything explosive or burnable will ignite, and even metals will be melted.

This is predicted by H. Grindell-Matthews, English scientist, who already has perfected a ray that explodes powder and cartridges, kills mice, shrivels plants and ignites things 64 feet away.

Science, which created material civilization, may boomerang as civilization's destroyer. The scientific goal is to make war so deadly that neither side will dare wage it. One argument against this is that humanity has a suicidal tendency.

OLD AGE.

At the age of 102 James Kirkley of Chicago tells how to live long. His rules include no worry, avoiding stimulants, working and playing regularly, cleanliness, cheerfulness, early to bed and to rise.

It's an old formula. Nearly all ancients repeat it when asked why they have survived so many years.

And it is the right formula—the natural, simple life. Trouble is, people want to burn themselves up by fast living, trying to cram several lifetimes into one. What they seek is a pill that will make them pass the century mark. A reasonable old age can be attained by almost anyone willing to pay the price—provided they selected their ancestors carefully. Very old age usually is hereditary.

MONOTONY.

His lifetime has been devoted to making 200 million gallons of paint. His name is Philip Steyer, and for half a century he has been toiling in one of the country's largest paint factories.

Maybe that seems like a monotonous record. But Steyer has enjoyed it. He has the smile of content. And his is just an average case, typical of the grind endured patiently by mother with her housework and father in office, factory or mill.

Civilization certainly makes us pay in full. Fortunately, that we haven't experienced the savage's freedom. The contrast might start us back to the jungles.

SPENDERS.

This country of ours spent over 36 billion dollars in March. That's shown by bank checks sent through the clearing houses. In three weeks Americans write enough checks to pay off the entire national debt.

There is absolutely no excuse for poverty in the midst of such fabulous wealth.

INCONCEIVABLE.

Speaking of old jokes, Germany now has nearly 700 quintillion paper marks in circulation.

This information is passed along for the benefit of people who imagine that marks will, after all, "come back."

Some writers gain reputations simply by writing so obscurely that their lack of thought is completely concealed.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

NO. 8—THE CITY OF ALADDIN

Suddenly an enormous genie appeared in the air.

"Where to, next?" asked Mister Muggs. They were going to have another adventure in Once-Upon-a-Time Land.

"Let's go to see Aladdin," said Nick. "Aladdin!" cried Mister Muggs. "Why, I had almost forgotten about him. We'll go to see him at once and ask him if he still has the wonderful lamp that he found in a cave."

So the little car came at last to a gorgeous Chinese city, where the houses had rubies for doors, knobs, emeralds for roof tiles and diamonds for window panes.

But before they had passed the first gate the little car stopped stony still and wouldn't move.

"Well, I declare!" said Mister Muggs as he pulled and tugged and hammered and shook the magic automobile. "This is the very first time I've had any trouble with this machine. Magic automobiles are supposed never to get out of order."

He looked in the radiator. "Why it's as dry as a bone!" he cried. "That's what's wrong."

"There's a tough," said Nick, "and I see a queer crooked little kettle near it. I'll go and bring you some water."

Which he did. He was just about to toss the queer little kettle of a thing away when Mister Muggs said quickly, "Here, let me see that thing."

Nick passed it over and the fairy-man looked it over closely. "If I'm not mistaken, this is magic," he remarked. And he gave it a rub with his coat sleeve.

Suddenly an enormous genie appeared in the air, about the ugliest creature you ever saw in your life.

"What is your wish? I am here to do your bidding. I and the other slaves of the lamp," he said in a thundering voice.

"The wicked magician from Africa came in the night and stole the lamp from Aladdin. But robbers attacked him as he left the city and took all he had. When they saw the lamp they thought it was worthless and threw it into your ditch. Whoever possesses the lamp owns its slaves also. The boy who picked it up is now our master."

"Oh, I don't want you," stammered poor Nick. "I—I'm much obliged just the same."

"But we can make you king of the earth," said the genie, "and build you cities more magnificent than this."

"No—no, thank you," said Nick. "If you'll just give us a push, we will take the lamp back to Aladdin. You'd better stay with him. I'm too little to be a king anyway, and I wouldn't know what to do with a lot of cities."

Aladdin was overjoyed at the return of his precious lamp.

The three visitors spent the day with him and his princess and had a fine time.

A FARMER'S DAY

(Original poem read by "Bill" Cunningham in Hayes township, Ida County, Iowa.)

Down on the farm 'bout half past four I slip on my clothes and sneak out the door.

Out to the yard I ran like the dickens To milk ten cows and feed the chickens.

Clean out the barn, cury Nance and Jiggs, Separate the cream and slop all the pigs.

Work two hours then eat like a Turk, And by heck I'm ready for a full day's work.

Then I grease the wagon and put on the rack, Throw a jug of water in an old grain sack.

Hitch up the horses, hustle down the lane, Must get in the hay for it looks like rain.

But look over yonder, sure as I am born, Cattle on the rampage, cows are in the corn.

Start across the meadow, run a mile or two, Heavin' like I'm windbroke and get wet clean through.

With my joints all a squeaking and muscles in a jerk, I'm fit as a fiddle for a full day's work.

Soon get to pitchin' the hay on the racks, Lightnin' gets to flashin'; thunder gives a crack.

Clouds roll up, black across the dell, Starts to rain, and rains like—well,

I don't care, don't even frown, Rest fixin' fence while the rain comes down.

Just get to restin' then for recompense, Nance got straddle the barbed wire fence.

Clothes all wet, so slip off my shirt, And by heck, I'm ready for a full day's work.

Work all summer 'till winter is high, Then I figure up the books and heave a sigh.

Worked all year, didn't make a thing And I've got less money than I had last spring.

Now some people say that there ain't no hell, But they never farmed, so they can't tell.

When the spring rolls 'round I'll take another chance, While the fringe grows longer on my pants.

Give my 'spenders a hitch, belt an other jerk, And by heck, I'm ready for a full year's work.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE

BY AHERN

I swung in the gears and started the car.

He had given me no orders, and naturally I thought he would like to get some of the dust of travel off before going to the office, or he would not have asked me to meet him. Evidently at first Jack did not realize where we were going, and we were nearly at the house before he wakened from his sullen reverie.

"Here, here, where are we going? Didn't you know I wanted to go to the office?"

"You didn't say so, Jack."

"It seems to me that anyone with sense would know that a man who had been gone 10 days from his business would want to go to his office first of all. I sometimes wonder how a woman thinks the money comes in that she spends so joyously. I should be at my office now."

The words were hurled into the air in front of him. He did not turn to look at me. I did not say a word, little Marquise. I just turned the car around toward the office.

"I'll probably find things at sixes and sevens," Jack remarked in a moment or two. "You see Mrs. Atherton has been away ever since I left. Have you heard anything from her since the funeral, Leslie?"

As we were in heavy traffic, I did not answer this. It seemed so obvious, that if Jack had stopped to think about it all he would realize that as the funeral was only day before yesterday, Sally would not take the time to write me, as her wire stated, she was coming back immediately. Evidently that thought preoccupied his mind at last, for he said:

"She'll probably be here today. I remember she wired she would return right after the funeral."

DIXON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IS IN BIG MOVEMENT

Has Vital Interest in Questions Before National Convention.

Harold B. Woodlief, Secretary of the Dixon Chamber of Commerce, one of the representative member organizations of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, today issued a statement calling attention to the importance of the problems upon which the attention of the business interests of the country will be focused at the annual meeting of the National Chamber at Cleveland, May 6 to 8.

"Three of the major questions confronting American business at the present time," he said, "are the agricultural situation, the European situation and its bearing upon domestic industry and the export trade, and the responsibility and integrity of business. They all will be discussed at Cleveland."

"These are general problems upon the solution of which the continued prosperity of the country in large measure depends and they can be solved only by united effort. They will be laid before the delegates attending the annual meeting of the National and international conventions."

"Interest is centered for the moment upon the ethical side of business. The fact is being brought home to many people that integrity is absolutely essential in modern business practice, for business is no longer a matter of purely personal contacts. It is national and even international in scope. Buyers and sellers in many cases never meet. If it is not built upon standards which inspire confidence it will collapse and we shall be compelled to return to old methods of barter."

"Agriculture, too, is a business question, not only for the individual farmer but for the individual business man whose prosperity is directly or indirectly connected with it. Agriculture and business can help each other but neither can help itself at the expense of the other."

"The European situation is again a topic of world discussion in view of the report of the committee of experts to the Reparations Commission. Just what it means to the American business man may be gathered from the fact that Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy were all among the first seven best customers of the United States last year. Improvement in their buying power means an improvement of our export trade. The outlook in Europe and the prospects of an economic adjustment will be put before the meeting in Cleveland by observers who have been in close touch with European affairs."

"A better understanding of all these questions and practical suggestions for the improvement of business conditions will probably be the outcome of the discussion. The business aspect of many other questions of current interest will be considered at group meetings which will deal with transportation, insurance, manufacturing and other subjects."

SHEAR FASHION

Hal Cockburn's DAILY POEM

There's a constant clippy-clipping and the girls all know it well. There's no telling when this fashion's going to stop. For the fair ones go on tripping, sometimes slow and oft pell-mell, go tripping to the corner barbershop. Sharpened shears are very busy; fine-tooth combs are on the job. Curls and hanging tresses are no more. Mister Barber Man is dizzy as he cuts a nifty bob and sends wafts of fuzzy-head hair to the floor.

"Yes, sir, Mister," says young sister, as she crawls into the chair. "I would like to have my hair cut very short." And then Mister wears a bluster as he trims the locks with care, shingle bob or shank or any other sort.

Grandma, too, has got the habit and her youth's returned somewhat. Why the craze has got the barbers fairly vexed. Where it used to be the men folks, it's their wives and mothers now who will answer when the barber man says "Next!"

OLD CITY HALL AT ALTON BURNS EARLY THIS A. M.

Mayor Thinks Historic Building Was Object of an Incendiary.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Alton, Ill., April 22.—The Alton city hall, historic building of colonial design and scene of the Lincoln-Douglas debate in 1858, was destroyed by fire this morning.

Mayor John Ellis says that there is no doubt the building was set afire. Contractors were to start today remodeling the building, which had been vacated. It was to be converted into a fire-proof structure at a cost of about $125,000. There was considerable objection to the plan for remodeling the building because it was to cost about $50,000 more than a bond issue that had been approved for that purpose. Agitation had been strong for the removal of the building from the site and making room there for a large public square.

It is said by the firemen that when they arrived the whole building was in flames and the odor of the burning of oil was strong. A high wind was blowing and within a few hours the building was a wreck, with part of the walls fallen.

The city carried insurance to the amount of $14,000 on the building but there may be a question as to realizing on it owing to the fact that the place had been vacated to the contractors.

FABLES ON HEALTH MORAL: GO AFTER HEALTH

"When you want to land a big order for your firm what do you do?" asked the physical director of Mr. Mann one evening.

"Why I go after it with both feet." "Exactly," agreed the director. "It's the same way with good health. You've got to go after it. Now they tell us that all men are born free and equal. But that doesn't apply to your health. Our ancestors had something to do with that."

"The trouble is that most people think health is merely freedom from disease. It's more than that; it's keeping well and also being able to enjoy life. Keeping life at the maximum vigor is the job, old top."

"People with health know that the best part of it is the happiness it brings."

"What I'm trying to get at is the ounce of prevention you hear so much about. Whether it be the teeth, the eyes, the ears or the beginning of any trouble—hit it quick. GO AFTER HEALTH."

In business you first want to know about the market. In health you want first to know about yourself. So the first step in going after health is to find out exactly what is your present condition.

"Have an inventory taken of your self. AND IF YOU HAVE HEALTH SEE THAT YOU KEEP IT."

I.—History of the Peril

I—HISTORY OF THE PERIL.
 Humanity has entered suddenly a new environment of peril—the peril of narcotic addiction.

Already, so quickly that we scarcely can realize what has happened, habit-forming drugs mean terror and suffering for millions, with America leading the world in consumption of opium, morphine, cocaine and heroin.

For other perils—venomous reptiles, poisonous plants, wild beasts, storm and flood—the race, in the slow process of evolutionary experience, has found its defenses, based on acquired knowledge of the thing to be feared.

For this new peril there is no precedent in racial experience. Its suddenness has found mankind unprepared to meet or combat it.

Modern chemistry, largely responsible, as yet offers no sure defense against the Frankenstein of its own creation. In its effort to alleviate human suffering, science has increased the total of human misery, and has lent itself to the merciless exploitation of the race.

About 100 years ago a chemist discovered how to produce morphine from opium. Then the menace extended to Europe, whose traders had exploited opium in Asia to the great degradation and misery of the Asiatics.

About 50 years ago another chemist produced cocaine. This increased the menace and extended the scope of exploitation for addiction purposes.

In 1898 a chemist discovered heroin, another child of opium, and four times as powerful as morphine. Then the present stage of the menace, now a pressing peril, began.

In 1909, heroin appeared in America in the practice of medicine. At first it was not believed to be habit-forming. The medical profession after a time outlawed its use. It is no longer recognized as a legitimate drug in medical practice.

Soon, however, heroin was recognized as more capable of commercial exploitation than any other narcotic. The great expansion of narcotic addiction in America, given impetus by heroin, dates from about 1910. This expansion continues almost unchecked, in spite of legal restraint and efforts at salvage of victims.

European chemists have discovered how to manufacture narcotics from coal-tar. New drugs are anticipated more powerful than those now used with such deadly results.

HIS BROTHER'S WIFE

by RUDY AYRES

© NEA SERVICE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Dolly, a governess, marries Nigel Bretherton for his money. The marriage proves an unhappy one. When Nigel is declared insane and sent to an asylum, Dolly leaves him in care of his best friend, Mary Farnival. Mary comes to live in Dolly's flat. Dolly tells Mary that she is sorry she did not marry a poor sultor named Robert Durham.

When word comes that Nigel has been killed in action, Dolly marries Robert in London and sails with him for America.

Nigel's older brother, David, calls to see Dolly's widow. He mistakes Mary for Dolly. Mary is ashamed to tell of Dolly's marriage, so lets David think that she is Nigel's wife. David goes from Nigel's home to call on an old friend.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
David stepped out on the path. He looked up at the dark face of the house, and a little reluctant smile curved his lips.

"Yes—this is the house."
He paid and dismissed the man, and went up the steps to the front door.

The light above the porch he glanced at the watch. It was nearly nine. He hesitated for a moment, then rang the bell.

After all, there were excuses for a late visit when a man had just returned to London after three years' absence. Fisher would not mind.

The maid who opened the door was doubtful if her master would see him. She took Bretherton's card reluctantly. After a moment a door of one of the sitting-rooms was flung open, and a man came eagerly into the hall.

"David, my dear old fellow!" He seized Bretherton by both hands and dragged him into the light. "I had no idea you were in England. When did you land? Why didn't you let me know?"

"I only landed this morning. I have been nowhere except—"
He broke off. A woman had followed Henry Fisher into the hall. She was golden-haired and beautifully dressed. Her eyes were bright with eagerness as they met David's.

"Oh, I am so glad to see you again! I couldn't believe it was you! But, oh, David, poor Nigel!"

They were in the drawing-room now, and Fisher had taken David's overcoat.

There was a little silence. "I just couldn't believe it when we heard!" Dora Fisher went on, in a shocked voice. "One hears of men being killed at the Front every day, but it seems impossible that anyone we know could be amongst them. Oh, David, it must have been a shock!"

"Yes."
Something in her almost exaggerated pity jarred on him. He looked relieved when her brother came back to the room.

"I ought to apologize for such a late visit," David was saying, "but there were several matters I wanted to speak to you about."

Dora sprang up from the deep chair where she was sitting; there was a little frown between her eyes. "You mean that you want me to go away? You are horrid, when I haven't seen you for three years! I'll just give you half an hour—no more. And, David, you are going to stay the night, aren't you? It's too late to get down to Red Grange, and I simply won't let you go to a hotel!"

"If I am not in the way," he began diffidently.

"We are only too glad to have you!" She left them, shutting the door after her.

Fisher was mixing whisky and soda at a side table.

"It's good to see you, David," he said affectionately. "I only wish it might have been in happier circumstances. Poor Nigel!"

"Yes," Fisher was bending over

"I wanted to speak to you about him. Why didn't you tell me he was married?"

Fisher flushed a little. "My dear chap, how could it? Nigel was so anxious to keep it back; seemed to think you'd be annoyed and cut down his allowance."

"Why should I have been annoyed?"

Fisher shrugged his shoulders. "Well, his wife was hardly—you know what I mean?"

"David thought of the woman he had left alone in that empty flat, with the tears still wet on her face. 'Hardly what?' he asked, with curious infection.

Fisher looked uncomfortable. "But, if you must know, she wasn't the sort of woman Nigel ought to have married. She was a nursery governess, I believe, and she married him for what he could give her; there's no doubt about that. I only saw her once."

He pushed a whisky and soda across to his friend.

"What was she like?" David asked. He took up the glass, holding it

"I believe so, but I cannot positively say. I called once, just after we heard of poor Nigel's death, but there was nobody at home, and one does not like to intrude, so I have left things for you to see to."

He drew up a chair close to David's, and looked at him affectionately.

"It's good to see you again," he said. "I'm glad to be home, too; there's no place like England, after all, what you like. I'm going to settle at Red Grange now."

"Good! Nothing could please me better. David, you'll be wanting a wife."

Bretherton laughed. "I'm a good deal better. No, I'd always thought Nigel and his sons should have the old place, and now he's gone—" He broke off heavily, with an overwhelming realization of all that his brother's death really meant. Neither spoke for a few moments, then Bretherton roused himself with a half sigh.

"What am I to do with Nigel's widow?" he asked, rather constrainedly. "I'd ask her to come and keep house for me at the Red Grange if I thought she'd accept, but—"

Fisher laughed rather scornfully. "Oh, she'd accept right enough; nothing would suit her better. She was always trying to get Nigel to ask you to allow them to live there; she fancied herself as a sort of Lady Darnley. I can tell you. Don't suggest it, David; don't ask her. It will only be making a rod for your back."

"You think so?"

"I'm sure of it. She's not the sort of woman you could ever tolerate about the old place; she's—well, she's vulgar—she'd jar on you—the way she dresses, the way she talks. She smokes cigarettes."

Bretherton made a little gesture of disgust.

"She does a hundred and one little things like that," Fisher went on. "Harmless things in themselves, but they go against the grain all the same. Besides, you couldn't possibly have her down at Red Grange without some sort of a chaplain."

"You're forgetting Aunt Florence; she'll come back, of course, if I go. She's part of the old place; I couldn't imagine it without her. You remember her? She looked after us when we were youngsters."

"You mean Miss Varney? Of course I remember her."

"She was my mother's sister, you know."

David sat forward a little, staring into the fire and frowning.

"Nigel's wife would be all right there with Aunt Florence," he said again, hesitatingly. "I'm sorry for the girl, Monty, in spite of what you say. I feel that I have a sort of duty to her."

the paper-strewn desk. "Showy-looking girl, in a way," he went on casually. "And out for all she could get, I imagine." He glanced up apologetically. "You asked my opinion, didn't you?" he submitted.

"Certainly I did; thanks very much. May I keep this, or do you want it?"

"Keep it by all means." Bretherton put the unmounted photograph in his pocket, and sat down in one of the big chairs by the fire; there was a little frown between his brows.

"Did you ever go to my brother's flat?" he asked presently.

"No. He asked me, but I don't fancy his wife would have been any too pleased if I'd taken advantage of the invitation, so I never went. Mrs. Nigel has had a friend living there with her for some time now. I believe—since the war broke out."

"A friend?"

"Yes; I never met her, but Nigel told me—when he came to say good-bye, poor lad—that his wife had made arrangements for a friend to stay with her during his absence."

"A friend of his, eh?"

"I believe so, but I know that it was. He spoke most affectionately of her. What was her name, now?"

Fisher—Furnival—a Miss Furnival. He gave me to understand that he had known her before his marriage."

"I see." There was a little pause. "And this lady—this Miss Furnival—was at the flat still, with my brother's wife?"

"I believe so, but I cannot positively say. I called once, just after we heard of poor Nigel's death, but there was nobody at home, and one does not like to intrude, so I have left things for you to see to."

He drew up a chair close to David's, and looked at him affectionately.

GIANTS WIN FIVE STRAIGHT; STAFF OF PITCHERS GOOD

Dope on McGraw's Box Artists Appear to Be All to Bad.

By Associated Press Licensed Wire

The Giants won their fifth straight game yesterday and created food for thought among followers of other teams who counted upon a flourishing pitching staff to block McGraw's path to another pennant.

In beating Boston 5-1, Jack Bentley held the Braves to seven hits. Splendid pitching by Bentley, Dean and Hunsinger, all youngsters, combined with effective hitting by Groh and Frisch, have sent the champions leaping ahead with surprising speed.

The Giants beat Jess Barnes after he was apparently on his way to a one-hit victory. Jackson's homer in the eighth tied the score and Groh and Frisch batted a victory in the ninth. The victors made but four hits.

Deberry, Brooklyn catcher, hit a homer with two men on in the tenth and the Robins defeated Philadelphia 7-4.

Cubs Lost in Tenth

After pitching fine ball for eight innings Grover Alexander weakened and Cincinnati's fighting team beat the Cubs 2-1 in the tenth after tying the score in the ninth. Rube Benton gave the Cubs only four hits.

Pittsburgh played another close game but for the first time it was a slugging battle. The Cardinals won 11-9. Each team used three pitchers. Blades, Cardinal outfielder, hit a homer.

Only two contests were played in the American League. Joe Bush held Washington to six hits, checking the Yank losing streak, and beat the Senators 4-2.

Rommel allowed the Red Sox but five hits and Philadelphia shut out Boston 4-0.

Joe Rabbitt, White Sox rookie outfielder, has been sent back to Muskogee, Oklahoma, whence he came. Rabbitt impressed Manager Evers with his determination, but the club is overstocked with outfielders and he was sent back for more seasoning.

Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals, champion National League batter, had a perfect day at the plate against the Pirates. He poked three hits, including a triple, in three times at bat.

Balk Home Run Kings

Paul Strand, former Salt Lake outfielder who led the Coast League in batting last season and drove in 187 runs for his club, teamed up with Al Simmons, former Milwaukee outfielder, who led the American Association in hitting, although in only 24 games and helped the Athletics shut out the Red Sox.

Babe Ruth and Cy Williams have a hard time gauging fences this season. Each drove out homers in Sunday's game, but failed to add to their specialty although Babe was at bat four times, going hitless while Williams poked a single in four times up.

Zack Wheat, veteran outfielder of the Dodgers who hit safely in every game he played this season and topped his work by getting five hits in his final contest last Saturday, will be unable to play for a week because of an attack of bronchitis.

Fred Schieber, first baseman for the St. Louis Americans who contracted blood poisoning in his left leg during spring training, has returned

OBITUARY

DELPHIN FAIVRE

(Contributed)

Friday morning, April 11, at 8 o'clock, Delphin Faivre heard the summons of his Heavenly Father and patiently resigned his will to God. He was born at Servance, France, Aug. 28, 1851, and when he was three years of age his parents immigrated to America, but fearing Delphin, a delicate child, could not survive the voyage, they left him in the care of an aunt. At the age of ten years, with some friends, he journeyed to America where he was reunited with his parents, sisters and brother at Portsmouth, O. Later he moved to May township, Lee county, Illinois.

Oct. 16, 1875 he was married to Miss Josephine Briott, who survives him. To this union eleven children were born. Two sons having preceded him in death—Louis dying in infancy and Delphin on Nov. 15, 1918. Those left to mourn him are: his broken-hearted wife, eight daughters and one son—Louise Hushman of Dixon, Alice Kinney of Crow Wing, Minn., Helen Kellen of Welcome, Minn., Catherine Kellen of Amboy, Ill., Rose Kellen of Mendota, Ill., Jennie Theobald, Florence Bormann and Mabel Terveer, all of Sherburn, Minn., Henry of Minneapolis; one sister, Mrs. A. Aubert of Maytown; forty-one grandchildren, many nieces and nephews and a host of friends.

In 1901 he purchased a farm five miles south of Welcome, moving from Maytown with his family. Two years later, owing unable to farm on so large a scale, he rented his farm and moved to Monterey; and three years ago he moved to Sherburn, where he made his home until his death. His health begin to fall about six months ago, and all that loving hands could do was done for him, but none could stay the hand of death, and although he was confined to his bed and too weak to help himself for three months, he was ever cheerful and spent the days and sleepless nights in prayer and meditation in which he seemed to forget his sufferings. He lived a life of humility, patience, charity and love toward God and man.

The funeral was held at St. Luke's church in Sherburn, conducted by Rev. F. R. Kearney and with burial in St. Luke's cemetery there. Those who attended from afar were: Henry Faivre of Minneapolis, Minn.; Mrs. John Kellen of Mendota, Ill., Mr. and Mrs. Charles Luft of Oklaheba, Minn., Mrs. K. P. Handerson and many friends from Monterey and Welcome.

TEN CENTS PER LINE FOR CARD OF THANKS.

Evidently there are some who do not understand that Card of Thanks run in a newspaper is purely a personal matter and not news, and consequently something for which a charge is made in all papers. Seventy-five cents is the minimum price in the Telegraph, so if those wishing a card run would save the money with copy it would save all further annoyance.

THIS BRIGHT BABY GIRL

Brought Joy to Home. Mrs. Price's Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Scotat, Pa.—"I never felt like working, and when I would try to do any work standing, my feet would just drag around all day long. At times I would have terrible pains and would be in bed three or four days. I was in this condition about a year when I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the papers. I had heard different women say it was good for women's troubles, and my aunt thought it would help me as it had helped her. So I took the Vegetable Compound and it brought things right, and I was in good shape before I became a mother again. I believe it helps at birth, too, as with both my other babies I suffered a great deal more than with this one. I thank you a thousand times for the good your medicine has done me."

—Mrs. ROBERT PRICE, Scotat, via Lockhaven, Pa.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, 98 out of every 100 report they were benefited by its use.
